

the case of Ilm-u-din, who killed the publisher of a book that mocked Muhammad. The original plan was to do a word search in the archive section and download ... from the computer. Then, if successful, we were to find what he had written. But as we started searching, we found that some words could not be found - they were unavailable. We didn't know why. We thought that maybe it had to do with some problem with the disk or the fact that the file was corrupted. We didn't know at the time that all the words had been replaced with letters. We didn't have time to figure it out. But we did see that the archive section contained all the words. And in the end, they were replaced with letters anyway.
